THE G. I. BILL OF RIGHTS

The Servicemen's Aid Act of 1944, less formally known as the G. I. Bill of Rights, as passed by the Congress and signed by the President last month, provides the following for men and women veterans of this war:

1. A total of 52 weeks' unemployment compensation at $20 a week at any time during the first two years after discharge.

2. Government guarantee of up to half, but not more than $2,000, on loans obtained from private lenders for the purchase of farms, small businesses and homes.

3. Four years education or the completion of interrupted education for anyone who entered the service before his 25th birthday, with tuition paid at $500 a year and allowances of $50 a month for single men and $75 for those with dependents.

4. A placement service to assist veterans in getting civilian jobs through the U. S. Employment Service.

5. Hospitalization.

The law specifies that any collected benefits will be deducted from any future bonus that the Congress may authorize.
